SENATOR JACK SCOTT NAMED TO PRESTIGIOUS POLICY INSTITUTE

SACRAMENTO – State Senator Jack Scott (D-Pasadena) has been named to the Board of Directors of a prominent education policy institute – The National Center for Public Policy and Higher Education. The National Center conducts research and analyses of policy issues related to higher education.

"I am excited to be a part of this talented group of educators and policymakers from across the nation," stated Senator Scott. "There is no better investment we can make than in the area of higher education and I am looking forward to working with the Center on ways to improve education and training beyond high school."

Senator Scott chairs the Senate Committee on Education, which considers all legislative measures dealing with the K-12 education and the state's colleges and universities. He also chairs the Senate Budget Subcommittee on Education, which oversees almost half of California's state budget.

The Center is a non-profit organization based in San Jose, California and is not associated with a government agency or political party.
